

Introduction

Humility and success are two elements that go hand in hand. Without humility a person cannot become successful let alone a great leader. Marvin Epstein, an entrepreneur in California known for his admirable success has discussed the importance of humility in a Leader. According to him, it is one of the most basic and vital recipes to success in the business world and even practical life.

Main Body

He began his session by naming some of the most powerful and renowned entrepreneurs of the world and shone light on their common characteristics naming it to be the ultimate reason behind their success. This quality than does not only make them a successful person to the world but more importantly to themselves. It not only makes a person powerful, positive, lets them have money but also have the most valuable thing in the world that is time. And surprisingly all this can be attained without any cost. As valuable and accessible it is, the world lacks it.

This quality is humility. Humility refers to “who you are not what you do” and this helps people to realize their roots and to live a modest simple life suited to them, not what the world aspires them to be. This humility is visible in all aspects of life, from home to offices and even schools. Humility allows a person to be authentic and to be yourself. It allows one to realize the value they bring in turn also realize the value brought by other people. Considering the realization of efforts of other people, humility is a quality most needed in a leader. Since a leader has to be supportive and motivating, he or she should be able to understand how to be grateful to sub-ordinates for their efforts and not think of himself as the better one but work together as a strong team moving towards the same goal and direction.

Conclusion

Humility involves turning emotions into logic. It allows processing emotions into logics and take decision accordingly. It also allows a person to reflect upon their lives and be grateful for their blessings and work on their lacking. Humility also helps earn reputation rather than value. It makes a person have an image that could last a lifetime. Humility also allows a person to invest in valuable aspects of life, realizing your part in life and how a person can show gratitude by appreciation and efforts. Most of the leaders in the world who are making money and value every single day are seen to observe a very humble life style, just because they practice humility which makes them aware of the value of things and efforts and realize the importance of success.
